Announcement

Our office handled a provocative spousal support modification hearing last month involving complex issues surrounding the factors the Court should consider when assessing requests for additional support, including: a “reservation” (the ability of a former spouse to seek additional support, or an award of spousal support when support was not initially ordered); what constitutes a valid change in circumstances; and whether a change includes increases in the income of the party paying support. A letter opinion from the Court is due in June and we look forward to sharing our “take-aways”!
